Lecturer in Bioscience - Quote Post Ref: AC08/24

Teaching Fellow in Bioscience - Quote Post Ref: OR08/15

Starting Salary: Grade 7a £30,013

You will work as members of an undergraduate team of biomedical, behavioural and social scientists in delivering the current curriculum and developing the new curriculum from 2007.

Whilst you will contribute to teaching across the whole bioscience curriculum, predominantly in Years 1 to 3, we are particularly interested in developing teaching expertise in the areas of Anatomy, Cancer, aspects of Developmental Biology and Immunology.

You will be expected to contribute to teaching and assessment activity in addition to developing appropriate resources to support student learning. Tasks will include acting as a Problem Based Learning tutor, providing seminars and lectures, assisting with practical and laboratory sessions, and conducting student assessments. You will also contribute to management and leadership of curriculum modules and units, in addition to assisting with the selection process for medical student entry.

You will have undergraduate and postgraduate qualifications in an area related to medicine, biomedical science or a related science. For the lecturer post, you will have evidence of potential to develop an independent research team that links to or complements existing research strengths at Keele. Applicants for the Teaching Fellow post will have experience in teaching in a medical school or similar environment, and a proven record of teaching excellence. Both posts require a proven record of strong organisational skills, excellent team working and communication skills.
